Foliceman Martin H. White, of Fort Hamilton, swore that he was called from his house to go down to Duffy's. Duffy told him to go around to the side to get aboard the local.

Suddenly a cry of alarm was raised as the express was heard from out the fog clattering along at a lifteen-mile rate of speed.

The engineer of the express evidently did not see the impending danger until within 100 feet of the local train, for the shrill shriek of the whitsle signailing "down brakes" for the whitsle signailing "down brakes" sounded but an instant before the crash conditions to go around to the side of the side. "Ar man has been killed ouside, and you are accused of killing him." "Indeed," he said. Well, I had to do it or he would have done it to me. I then arrested him, and as we passed the body Duffy said: "You then me." "To me he said: What's a man going to do when a man comes in and tries to run your place."
